SUNDAY APPEAL

BEFICIAL JOURNAL OF THE CITY. BUNDAY MORNING. : : : : FEB. 25, 1872,

THE NEXT PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION. The newspaper which prates about the popularity of Grant and the im possibility of defeating him reads to little purpose the signs of the times. Grant is the weakest man in the Republican party. His only strength consists in the support of his office holders. To talk about the popularity of the president and his invincibilty before the people, when he has been deserted by Sumner, Trumbull, Greeley, Davis, Logan, Schurz and Gratz Brown, the fathers of the Republican party is an absurdity. Have these men no influence? Even in Washington city Grant is held in contempt by his own party who reregard him as corrupt. The same upheaval of public opinion which overwhelmed the Tammany thieves will yet crush out the corruptions of the White House rogues. The Tammany frauds and robberies in New York are dwarfed when compared with the frauds and robberies perpetrated through Grant's administration. The president is responsible for the universal corruption of his officeholders. He set the example. He is the most guilty of all. Elected president by a grateful and confiding people, he has used his power as if it were his own private property to be employed to enrich himself, his family and his invorites. Accepting presents, and giving offices in return; begging from munificent citizens a donation of one hundred thousand dollars to General Sherman, in order that he might get sixty five thousand dollars for a house which he had just sold to another man for forty thousand dollars; appointing as governor of the District of Columbia the chief owner of a sandstone company, in which he had received as a present twenty-five thousand dollars in stock; conferring valuable and honorable offices and emoluments upon worthless relations of himself and his wife, when he knew that they were undeserving and unfit; appointing a convicted bribe-taker to a most important station and promoting him after his bribe-taking had become notorious, this President has done more to destroy in the public mind all distinction between right and wrong, to make it appear that the great object of life and the chief purpose of official authority is to acquire riches, and that it makes no difference by what means this object is attained. "Had Grant been a pure man, with a high moral sense, a delicate feeling of honesty, and a just conscience, his example, his influence, and his power would long since have sufficed to turn back the rising tide ent struggling." Should the Philadelphia Republican convention nominate him, because such a nomination would reconcile Sumner and Trumbull, and Greeley and all the honest Republicans that oppose the adminisany other combination most likely to the gauge of the road, the desire here annually in the county. #### A RED HAT UR AMERICA.

The death of the venerable Archbishop Spaulding, of Baltimore, amid the mourning in the Catholic church caused by the death of one of its brightest ornaments, recalls a question that was the subject of animated discussion after the demise of a no less distinguished prelate, Archbishop Hughes, of New York. This is the long-expected cardinal's hat to which America is entitled, and which, it was said, would have been conferred on either of the above-mentioned prelates had not death claimed them for a higher destiny. At the approaching consistory of the Catholic church, to be held in the Vatican this north, a considerable number of scarlet hats will likely be distributed by Pore Pius IX. When we consider the influential and important position occupled by the Catholic church in the United States, and the vast number of its children, it is but reasonable to expect that one of these scarlet hats will find its way across the Atlantic. The South American bishops are said to entertain sanguine hopes that the desired dignity will be conferred on one of their number; yet it is not easy to see what claims they can advance paramount to those of their breth-ren in North America. Intelli-gence, education, enterprise and constantly increasing power are the qualities that distinguish the great republic from its misnamed imitators in the South, and the presence of one of the sacred college here closer to the Holy See, anfi among his brethren in this country, candidate for the scarlet but. New York is the most important diocess in the United States, and the noble character and profound erudition of Archbishon McCloekey give him a commanding influence in the Aguerican church. Among the twenty-four hats not find a worthy possessor in New York. The jealousy of Italians against the introduction of foreigners into the Sacred College has considerably abated during the long reign of Pio Nono, and an American cardinal might ex-
